The Spectator, a weekly insurance re view paper, has prepared an interesting tabulation og the essential features of the Climbers Meet Death statements of the principal insurance companies in the United States, which do about 90 per cent of the business.

Of these companies, holding a total cash capital of $111,286,809, the majority either broke even at the end of the year or suffered only a light falling off of cash assets, but the total decrease in assets for the year 1912 was $9,317,770, whereas for all previous years back to 1903 the decrease in net surplus was $9,872,985.

It is interesting to note from this statement that the total income of the insurance companies for 1912 was $351,453,950 and that the total losses paid were $170,593,406. The total assets of these companies on January 1 were $608,009,976. Total disburse ments were reported to be $312,296,899.

Although admitting that her cute little feet, said by judges to be the most beautiful in the world, were the original cause of all her marital troubles, Mrs. Clara S. Houston, who is suing Nat C. Houston, commission man, for divorce, refuses to withdraw from the chiropody and pedal beauty career which she has entered. She is now in Omaha, stopping at the Henshaw, and says she is armed with depositions "of a rather sensational nature," which she promises to apring in the divorce hearing, if her husband refuses her demands for the $5,000 settlement which she alleges was provided for in a preuptial agreement

Hearing on the question of jurisdiction Sutton in district court next Saturday. At the Henshaw yesterday, she said she was anxious to avoid publicity and wanted to get "as quiet a divorce as possible." However, when her "most beautiful feet" were mentioned, she beamed with pleasure, but immediately assumed a woe-begone expression, as she shoved her little feet out from under her skirt and Commonwealth Life glanced down at them.

I gave cruelty as grounds for divorce in my petition, but only to spare him as much as possible. Maybe he will make me use my depositions," she added demurely, The first important question to be settled by the court will be whether or not Mrs. Houston is within its jurisdiction and therefore able to bring suit here. She admits having lived in Chicago for over a year and a half, but asserts that as she is still the wife of Mr. Houston,
